John, I thought more about the recording of the meetings by the video club. The board is not required by law to videotape the meetings then it would appear possible to continue the practice as you have it, where the club tapes the meetings, makes DVD's, and charges what they feel is appropriate. These are unofficial copies of the board meetings, available from the video club, and the charges are to reimburse the club, and can be set by the club.

Janet has questions for the attorney regarding public records policy so we should know soon about whether the "government" must record and provide official videotapes of the meetings.

I will take this email to the office to make it part of public record.
